THE LEGEND OF HEIRY VON STEIN.

Out from the dark wild forest Rode the terrible Heirs Von Stein; He paused at the down of a tavern, And gazed at the ewinging sign. Then he sat himself down in a corner, And growled for a bottle of wine; Up came, with a flask and a corksoraw, A maiden of beauty divine!

Then he eighed with a deep love longing, And said, "Oh, damsel mine, Suppose you just give a few kisses To the valorous Enter Von Stein." New Dry Goods. M. D. It has been a delightful commencement of the misical season again to hear Ole Bull's violin, which drew such crowds, and excited such raptures, when he visited this country nine, years ago. He plays with even a deeper supression, a more exquisite delicacy of touch, than he then played; and the violin, more fortunate than us poor mortals, has increased beauty of voice the older it grows. It is perfectly ravishing to the car to hear it singing, in tones now clear and brilliants as the woodthrush, then A. G. BURLEY & CO. C R O C K E R Y , C H I N A ,
